

MIS Quarterly* appoints new Editor-in-Chief

Dr. Andrew Burton-Jones has been appointed as the next Editor-in-Chief of MIS Quarterly effective January 1, 2021.

Andrew is Professor of Business Information Systems at the UQ Business School, University of Queensland, Australia. He has a Bachelor of Commerce with First Class Honours and Master's of Information Systems from the University of Queensland and a Ph.D. from Georgia State University. After graduating with his Ph.D., Andrew began his academic career at the Sauder School of Business, University of British Columbia.

His research focuses on how individuals and organizations can use information systems more effectively, how to improve methods for systems analysis and design, and how to improve theories and methods used in the Information Systems discipline. Recently, much of his work has focused on the digital transformation of the healthcare sector. He has received over $9M in funding for his research over the years, and he has received several awards for his research, teaching, and service, including the MISQ Best Paper Award and a Killam Teaching Prize at the University of British Columbia. Prior to his academic career, Andrew was a senior consultant in a big-4 accounting/consulting firm.

Andrew has served on the MISQ Editorial Board as an Associate Editor from 2009–2012 and as Senior Editor since 2013. In taking this role as Editor-in-Chief, Andrew is particularly thankful to all the authors, reviewers, and editors he has learned from during these years.

Andrew will replace Arun Rai as Editor-in-Chief and will work with him to achieve a smooth transition.

We take this opportunity to extend our sincere gratitude to Arun for the work he has done in his term as Editor-in-Chief.